

SOME FIRES CAN'T BE CONTAINED

A sharp-tongued divorce attorney who stopped believing in love.

A devastatingly charming best man she shared one unforgettable night with three years ago. Two weeks of forced proximity on the sun-drenched Amalfi Coast, co-planning a wedding neither of them can escape. As golden afternoons in lemon groves and stolen moments on moonlit balconies tear down her walls, Lena discovers Marco isn't the careless playboy she told herself he was—he's a man haunted by a loss that mirrors her deepest fear. But when a secret from their past threatens to destroy everything, Lena must choose: the safe cynicism that protects her, or the terrifying leap that real love demands.
